Where to Go Instead of Iceland

You've heard of Reykjavik — but what about the Azores?

For the past decade or so, Iceland has been the place to go, and for good reason. It's easy to reach, safe to visit and absolutely gorgeous. And word has spread: Last year, the nation of 334,000 hosted more than 2 million visitors. But never fear: If you like to be on the cutting edge of family travel — or just enjoy seeing places that aren't overrun with tourists — we've found the next Iceland. Welcome to the Azores.
